What makes their origins particularly strange is the way they intertwined myth with history.

Prophetic Signs and Omens: The Aztecs believed that their migration and eventual founding of Tenochtitlán were guided by divine signs—most famously, the vision of an eagle perched on a cactus devouring a snake. Sacrifice as a Spectacle: These rituals were public spectacles, involving music, dance, and elaborate costumes. The spectacle served both religious purposes and as a display of Aztec power.

Strange Ritual Objects: Sacrificial tools included obsidian blades, and the hearts were often offered atop a ceremonial stone called the tzompantli, a skull rack adorned with skulls of sacrificed victims, creating a chilling landscape of death and devotion.

Bloodletting Rituals and Self-FlagellationBeyond human sacrifice, the Aztecs practiced regular bloodletting rituals involving:

Self-Flagellation: Nobles and priests would pierce their bodies with obsidian blades or thorned devices to draw blood, believing this act would nourish the gods and bring favor.

Ceremonial Bloodletting: Elite individuals would perform elaborate bloodletting ceremonies, sometimes involving the extraction of blood from the tongue, genitals, or earlobes. These practices highlight a society obsessed with blood as a divine offering, which seems strange and intense from an outsider's perspective.

Odd Death Rituals and Posthumous Practices The Aztecs believed that death was not an end but a transition to another realm, and their funerary customs often involved strange rites.

Death by Certain Causes: Different types of death led to different afterlives. For example, warriors who died in battle or those sacrificed in rituals were believed to go to the sun or the eastern paradise, respectively. Interestingly, suicides, especially those involving self-sacrifice, were highly regarded.
